DECEMBER

World AIDS Day

“I don't mind if I die tomorrow. I have lived, in every sense of the word.”

Freddie Mercury

The United Nations General Assembly by its resolution A/RES/43/15 notes that the World Health Organization (WHO) declared the 1st December 1988, as World AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) Day.

This commemoration has become one of the most recognised international health days and a key opportunity to raise awareness, remember those who have died, and celebrate victories such as access to prevention and treatment services.

There are also a number of methods to reduce the risk of HIV infection and increase protection, for example:

- Use of male and female contraceptives;
- Use of antiretroviral drugs as pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP);
- Voluntary medical male circumcision (VMMC);
- Reducing the number of sexual partners and;
- The use of sterile needles and syringes

POSADAS MEXICANAS

TRADICIONES NAVIDEÑAS

16th December

Las Posadas is a festivity of religious origin and typical of Mexican culture that has been celebrated since pre-Hispanic times.

Las Posadas consist of 9 stations that begin on the 16th of December and symbolically represent the nine months of the long pilgrimage that Joseph and Mary lived before being able to bring the Messiah, Jesus Christ, into the world.

During the festival it is typical to make piñatas, which were originally clay pots of pre-Hispanic origin and were made to honour the gods.

Nowadays these piñatas are filled with sweets and are made with newspaper and glue.

The piñata that Christianity established changed its shape to one consisting of seven spikes symbolising the seven deadly sins, which must be overcome by the believer who faces it with their eyes closed.

The activity enjoys great popularity throughout the country and is one of the most eagerly awaited festivities for Mexican children before Christmas.

International Day for Universal Health Coverage: A Step towards a Healthy Future for All.

The International Day for Universal Health Coverage is celebrated every 12th December to raise awareness of the importance of ensuring that all people have access to quality health services, without facing financial hardship. This celebration, endorsed by the United Nations and the World Health Organization (WHO), seeks to highlight the need for equitable and affordable health coverage for a healthy and sustainable future.

Universal health coverage implies that all people have access to essential health services, including prevention, promotion, treatment, rehabilitation and palliative care, regardless of socio-economic factors. It is based on the principle that health is a fundamental human right and essential for the well-being of individuals and the development of societies.

In the framework of the International Day for Universal Health Coverage, various activities are taking place around the world to promote awareness of this issue. Organisations such as the National Human Rights Commission in Mexico (CNDH) and the Instituto de Salud para el Bienestar (INSABI) are actively involved in disseminating information and promoting policies and programmes that seek to achieve universal health coverage in the country.

Universal health coverage not only refers to access to medical services, but also involves ensuring the availability of essential medicines, vaccines, equipment and basic health technologies. In addition, addressing health inequalities, removing financial barriers and improving the quality of health services are essential.

Implementing universal health coverage requires the collaboration and commitment of governments, health professionals, international organisations and society at large. Adequate investment is needed in strong health systems, training of medical personnel, health infrastructure and equitable and sustainable financing systems. This not only benefits individuals, but also has a positive impact on the development of communities and nations. Health promotion, disease prevention and timely access to quality services contribute to reducing the burden of disease, improving productivity and promoting equal opportunities for all.

The International Day for Universal Health Coverage reminds us of the importance of ensuring that all people, regardless of their background or social status, have access to quality health services. By raising awareness, working to implement appropriate policies and ensuring investment in strong health systems, we can move towards a more equitable society in terms of health.

NOCHEBUENA

24th December

Traditions and customs are a way of remembering what happened, or what used to happen, in times past. Christian families usually get together on the night of 24th December, Christmas Eve, and have a very hearty dinner. It is customary to eat turkey and other dishes typical of the season.

It is meant to be a special dinner, different from every day, as it is celebrating the Birth of the Son of God. This custom was born in Europe and symbolises the abundance that Christ brings us with his coming.
